Colorful art form

Murals, an art form often representative of Mexican and Indian cultures, are adding beauty and charm to outside walls of a number of Gilroy buildings.

The soft, muted pastel-colored motifs provide a welcome relief from bland walls with scenes ranging from a 30-foot high Aztec calendar to street scenes.

All the murals shown were painted by the Tecolote Corps from The Dept. of Culture as part of a Comprehensive Employment and Training Act project for area youth. Lending their expertise to the effort are members of the Watsonville-based Topanga Patrol.
